Junior cadets collapse on Patriots Day

By SEAN SCHANTZEN

Twenty-two Provo High School junior ROTC cadets became light-headed and a few blacked out Thursday afternoon in Brigham Square, during the Patriots Day parade.

"We were just standing here in the Robinson Center and they pulled in a girl who was looking pretty scary and started dragging her," said Hilary Powell, 19, a sophomore with an open major, from Brigham City. "Then they started to pull in more and more kids and it got to be a large number of kids, then the police and ambulance showed up."

The junior cadets came to BYU to learn more about the ROTC program and to put training they receive into practice, said Sergeant Blask, non-commissioned officer in-charge of the BYU ROTC detachment.

"We invited the Provo High students to come and participate and we had several students fall ill from standing at attention too long," Blask said.

Provo and BYU Emergency Medical Services treated the cadets for shock and light-headedness before the cadets were released to junior ROTC administrators, Blask said.

"They started pulling out the kids once they saw that they (the cadets) were starting to get woozy," said Chris Stromberg, 18, a freshman with an open major from St. Louis.

The cadets were pulled out of the formation they were in before they completely passed out so that they wouldn't fall and hurt themselves, Blask said.

"We only called out the paramedics as a precaution to have each child checked out, because they are minors," Blask said. "We just wanted to make sure they were medically fit before we released them."

The position the cadets were standing in may have led to their dizziness, he said.

"If someone locks their knees and doesn't move their legs around then they very well could pass out or experience dizziness," said Dr. Robert Romney, Medical Director of the BYU medical center.

Another cause was the students didn't get a complete meal before the event, Blask said.

Dancers strut their stuff

By BETSY McIFF

leek hair, flashy costumes, orange skin and visual entertainment are all part of the extravaganza known as the semiannual Dancesport Championships.

The BYU Ballroom Dance Department is hosting the competition this weekend in the Wilkinson Student Center Ballroom.

The competition has become a tradition at BYU with entrants from all over the country, said Curt Holman, ballroom dance division administrator. The event starts at 7:30 tonight and Saturday night. Tickets are $7 for general admission through the Fine Arts ticket office.

"There are two purposes of the competition," said Holman. "First, it gives students enrolled in ballroom dance classes a chance to compete, and second, there is an open category so anyone can enter, university students or not."

BYU dance instructor Elaine Grenko said she believes the competition is beneficial for her students because it allows them to dance at a higher level than they normally would.

"To compete, dancers must practice harder and spend more time preparing for the event," Grenko said. "Seeing the progress other students are making motivates dancers to continue on and participate in higher level classes."

Utah Sen. Bennett part of Senate leadership changes

By KACEY EARL

Utah Sen. Bob Bennett was appointed chief deputy whip on Wednesday when Senate Republicans met to elect new leaders for the Republican caucus.

Sen. Trent Lott of Mississippi was re-elected as Senate Republican leader.

Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky was elected assistant majority whip and named Bennett to chief deputy whip. In the Nov. 5 elections, Republicans reclaimed the Senate majority. "I'm honored to join Senator McConnell in this new assignment," Bennett said in a news release. "I have the greatest respect for him and Senator Lott and look forward to this opportunity to work closely with them to help set policy and strategy in the senate."

Bennett was elected to the U.S. Senate on Nov. 3, 1992 and was re-elected in 1998.

As chief deputy whip, Bennett will help create legislative strategy and policy and determine the Senate schedule.

"Senator Bennett is now part of the Senate leadership team," said Mary Jane Colli Priest, communications director for Sen. Bennett.

"This is significant because they are the individuals who chart the course for the Senate for the schedule for the strategy," she said.

BYU political science professor Byron Daynes said Bennett's new position will not significantly change his influence in the Senate.

"A good deputy whip is one who stays behind the scene and works hard for their party," Daynes said. "It's a position for counting votes and delivering vote totals to the majority leader."

Sen. Bob Bennett

Bennett told the Deseret News he plans to meet with McConnell to begin choosing other deputy whips. They will help count where the votes are for different legislation and develop tactics in ways to gain votes to pass bills.

Colli Priest said Bennett is joining a small team of the senior Republican leadership group. They meet at least weekly, sometimes more often than that.

"It will be an interesting path now that the majority of the Senate are Republicans and the White House is in Republican hands as well," Colli Priest said. "The last time Senator Lott was the majority leader, Clinton was in office, so it will be a different flavor and we're all looking forward to that."

Democrats met Thursday and elected Rep. Nancy Pelosi of California as leader of the minority House Democrats.

"Hopefully we can find a great deal of common ground with Republicans," Pelosi told the Associated Press. "But where not, we will put up the fight."

LDS Church plans appeal to U.S. Supreme Court

By KIRA CLUFF

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints said Thursday it will petition Washington for the right to regulate conduct on their downtown Salt Lake City Main Street Plaza.

Church lawyers immediately began the appellate process after a full panel of 10th Circuit Court judges denied a rehearing of the lower court's ruling Thursday.

Undeterred, the church said they are not ready to abandon the constitutional arena. Lawyers hope the Supreme Court justices will agree the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals failed to properly address all of the issues.

"Like all U.S. citizens, we highly value the freedom of expression which the United States Constitution guarantees," said

"The Constitution also guarantees property owners, including churches, the right to the full enjoyment of their property."

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

the church in a recently issued statement. "However, we also point out the very first freedom mentioned in the Constitution is religious freedom. The Constitution also guarantees property owners, including churches, the right to the full enjoyment of their property."

Stephen C. Clark, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union of Utah, said he doubts the Supreme Court will hear the case.

"Pursuing an appeal is certainly within the losing party's right. However, the Supreme Court tends to look for situations where appellate courts disagree," Clark said.

"There's no conflict here, nothing novel. Every appeals court has ruled in favor of the ACLU," he said.

BRIEFING

Eva Silverstone, 3, sits on her father's shoulders during a Fire Brigades Union meeting at the Assembly Rooms in Edinburgh Thursday. The union's leader, Andy Gilchrist, attended the mass union rally on Thursday, the first day of a 48-hour firefighter strike.

Britain struggles to fight fires during firefighter strike

LONDON (AP) — Soldiers with antiquated equipment battled fires across Britain Thursday, struggling to fill the gap created by firefighters on a 48-hour strike. Three elderly people died following house fires during the first night of the walkout.

Crews of soldiers driving 1950s-era military trucks known as Green Goddesses to blazes around the country provided only basic emergency protection. The government admitted the coverage was far less than that usually provided by members of the Fire Brigades Union, who are demanding $49,600 a year, a 40 percent pay increase.

The soldiers began work at 6 p.m. Wednesday, when the firefighters started the first of a series of threatened strikes. Union members crossed picket lines to help soldiers at some fires where lives were in danger.

It was difficult to know whether any fire deaths resulted directly from the strike, but Britain's news media gave intense coverage to the first three deaths.

The military said soldiers arrived at the home of a 76-year-old woman in Newtown, central Wales, six minutes after being summoned Wednesday evening and got her out of the smoky building eight minutes later. She died at a hospital shortly after.

Fire Brigades Union leader Andy Gilchrist offered condolences to the victim's family and praised local firefighters who rushed from their picket lines to help fight that blaze.

"Firefighters on the spot reacted in the way the public knew they would and I applaud them for doing so," he said.

Psychic settles with FTC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The operators of Miss Cleo's psychic hot line agreed Thursday to cancel $500 million in customer bills to settle federal charges that the service fleeced callers while promising mystical insights into love and money.

The settlement requires Access Resource Services Inc. and Psychic Readers Network Inc. to stop using pay-per-call numbers to sell their soothsaying services, the Federal Trade Commission said. The two Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based companies, which promoted a national network of "psychic readers" on television and the Internet, also must pay the FTC a $5 million fine.

"I'm no psychic but I can foresee this: If you make deceptive claims, there is an FTC action in your future," said Howard Beales, director of the FTC's consumer protection bureau.

China faces new president

BEIJING (AP) — Facing an era of galloping change, China's communists stepped into a new age Thursday, sending President Jiang Zemin toward retirement, pushing a younger generation of leaders forward and changing their mission to welcome the emerging capitalist class.

Hu Jintao, the man expected to replace Jiang in the monumental task of running China in an era of rapid change, became the only top politician re-elected to the party's ruling elite. It was the most solid sign yet of his ascent to the top of Asia's largest, fastest-growing country.

The 59-year-old vice president is the odds-on favorite to succeed Jiang as head of the party — and as president in March — in the first truly orderly transfer of authority since the communists took China in 1949.

JARRATT, Va. (AP) — A Pakistani man who killed two CIA employees in a 1993 shooting rampage outside the agency's headquarters was executed Thursday as the State Department warned of global retaliation against Americans.

Aimal Khan Kasi, 38, died by injection at the Greenville Correctional Center at 9:07 p.m.

The U.S. Supreme Court rejected an appeal hours before he was to die, and Gov. Mark R. Warner denied a request for clemency.

Kasi killed CIA communications worker Frank Darling, 28, and CIA analyst and physician Lansing Bennett, 66, as they sat in their cars at a stoplight in McLean.

Woman heads Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats on Thursday made Rep. Nancy Pelosi the first woman ever to head a political party's caucus in Congress.

In choosing Pelosi on a 177-29 vote, Democrats tasked the veteran California congresswoman with reviving a party stunned by election setbacks and facing a political landscape in which the White House and both houses of Congress are controlled by Republicans.

Democrats settled on the 62-year-old liberal to succeed Dick Gephardt of Missouri, who ended his eight years as party leader after an election where Republicans cemented their control over the House and won back the majority in the Senate.

Gun company fined

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A jury ordered a gun distributor Thursday to pay $1.2 million to the widow of a teacher gunned down by a 13-year-old student, largely sparing the company from blame in a landmark case targeting inexpensive handguns.

Valor Corp. was found to be just 5 percent responsible for the slaying of Barry Grunow two years ago.

The jury also surprised plaintiff's attorneys by ordering the Lake Worth school board to pay $10.8 million and the owner of the gun to pay $12 million, saying the two parties were 95 percent responsible for the slaying.

They were named as defendants.

Pam Grunow's attorney Montgomery said he didn't want the school board or the gun distributor to pay anything. He would ask the judge to order the gun distributor to pay the award.

Pam Grunow sued, claiming the pistol used in the slaying often falls into the hands of juveniles and criminals.

It was the first case to address both the absence of a gun safety law and the flaws associated with cheap, easily concealed weapons.

J dance student Lisa Millett, a junior from Orem, majoring in communications, said she looks forward to competing in the Dancesport Championship every year.

"Competing is fun because we get to take what we have learned and perform it for an audience," Millett said. "When there is an audience we perform better and really get involved with them."

Dancers outside of the university also enjoy competing in the open division.

"I have danced in the competition for 15 years and won the premiership competition four times," said ballroom dancer Lizzy Valenzuela from West Jordan. "I like dancesport because it is so well organized. It also allows dancers to show all over Utah to showcase their talents."

The open category includes dancers as young as 7 years old.

Watching the little ones dance is one of the most fun parts of the competition," Valenzuela said. "They have so much personality and talent when they dance."

In addition to the competition, there will be general dancing on the floor between categories and a special showcase on Friday and Saturday night. The showcase will feature former World Ten Dance Champions Amy and Diana McDonald.

It is an opportunity in itself to see the McDonalds dance," Valenzuela said. "They are the first couple from the United States to win the world championships, and we are lucky to have them come."

The competition as a whole is entertaining to just watch, Valenzuela said. Ballroom is a spectator sport and attendees enjoy watching while the dancers are busy performing for the audience, she said.

Reclusive star makes court appearance

Associated Press

SANTA MARIA, Calif. — Michael Jackson kept his fans and adversaries waiting Thursday, showing up four hours late to testify for a second day in a $21 million lawsuit against him.

After a judge granted him permission to postpone his scheduled testimony until the afternoon, the reclusive pop star arrived at the courthouse without the surgical mask he had worn a day earlier, but carrying a black umbrella.

Sporting a blue corduroy suit and bright red shirt, Jackson's arrival sparked cheers from about 200 waiting fans.

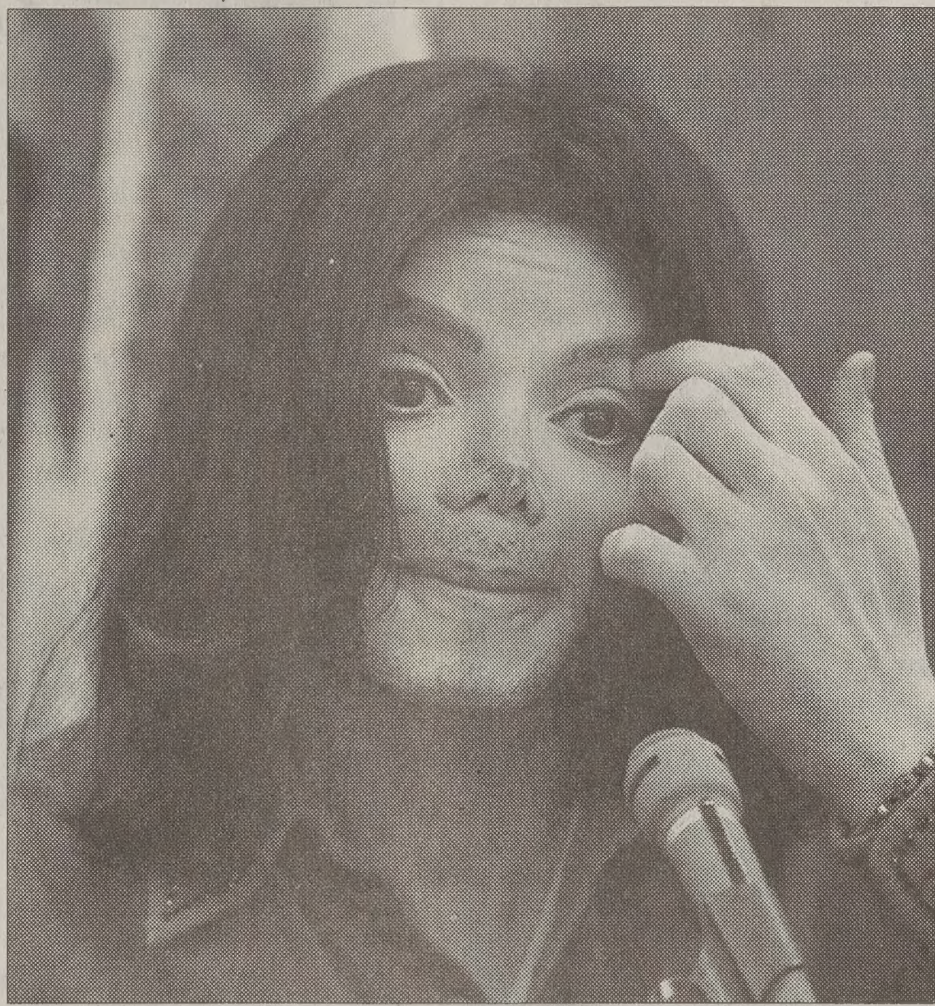

The singer took several minutes to sign autographs, throwing kisses as he moved past the barricaded crowd and flashing the thumbs-up sign when he went inside.

Jackson is being sued for $21 million by his longtime promoter, Marcel Avram.

Avram alleges Jackson backed out of two millennium concerts scheduled for New Year's Eve 1999.

Jackson maintains that it was Avram, not he, who canceled the shows over concerns they would not be profitable.

During his testimony Thursday, Jackson exhibited a showman's flair under questioning from Avram's Los Angeles attorney, Louis R. "Skip" Miller.

Entertainer Michael Jackson testifies in Santa Maria Superior Court, Wednesday, in a trial in which he is accused of canceling concert appearances, costing the promoter several million dollars.

At one point, Miller questioned Jackson's contention that he had worked toward the concerts by practicing dance moves and making plans to include magic in the act.

"Magic?," Miller said. "Yes, magic, as in abracadabra," Jackson answered, drawing appreciative laughs from spectators.

Jackson's lawyers offered no explanation for why their client needed to postpone his appearance at the last minute when jurors already had been assembled.

His representatives did not return calls Thursday.

Burial box may be closest link to Jesus

Associated Press

TORONTO — A limestone ossuary box that may be the oldest archaeological link to Jesus goes on public display Friday after Ontario Museum curators repaired cracks incurred on its return from Israel.

The 20 by 11-inch box, known as the James ossuary, has an inscription that reads, from right to left, "James, son of Joseph, brother of Jesus."

Museum officials unveiled the ossuary Thursday, giving journalists a view of the artifact that drew global attention when its existence was made public last month in Biblical Archaeology Review.

The beige box sits in a glass case at the center of a red-painted room on the third floor of the museum. A crack that runs through "brother" and "of" in the inscription is visible by the beige filling.

Informational text written in Aramaic on the walls contains historical, biblical and archaeological details. For example, the text lists an inventory of almost 900 ossuaries showed 19 have the name of a Joseph and 10 of a James, with one known to have the name of Jesus, son of Joseph, inscribed on it.

Statistically, the combination of the three names in the ossuary increases considerably by the possibility that this is James, the brother of Jesus of Nazareth," the text reads.

Ran Rahimi, the museum's director of collections management, said extensive work on the ossuary left it in "great shape" during the public exhibition scheduled to run until Dec. 29.

Rahimi said the repairs were left so that viewers could see them, and were reversible.

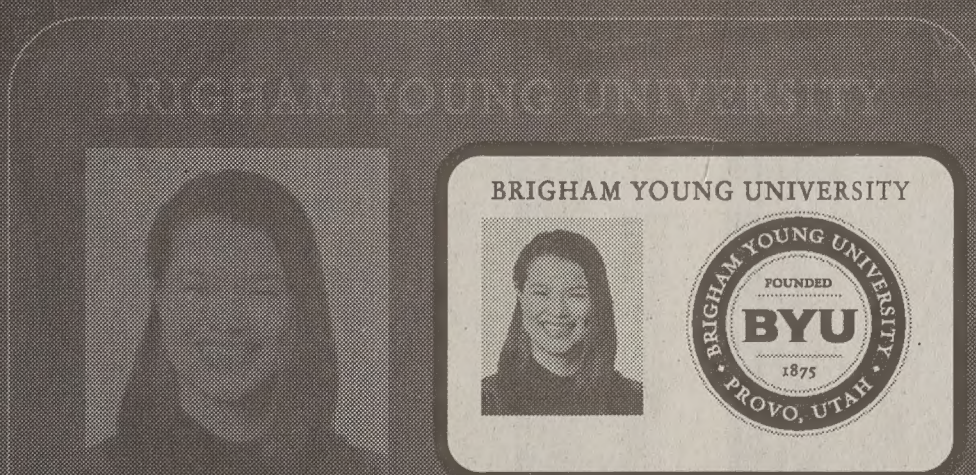

Restorers said they saw what they believed were fossils of roots and bacterial staining during the repair. They also discovered an incised star-circle of minute flecks of red paint on the back of the box, common decorations on ossuaries dating between 50-70 A.D.

The discovery was very exciting to make, Rahimi said. The ossuary had already received such close scrutiny because of the inscription," said Edward Keall, the museum's director of Near Eastern and Asian civilizations.

Y falls to Utes in OT

By KURT PLASTER

Two streaks ended Thursday night for the SOCCER BYU women's soccer team as it fell to Utah 3-2 in overtime at South Field.

The Cougars were previously unbeaten against Utah and had won 13 straight before the season-ending loss in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"Two teams with great character really wanting it like that get you a great game," Utah head coach Rich Manning said.

The emotional game saw officials call 39 penalties. A penalty led to the eventual game-winning goal.

BYU made an unbelievable goal to tie it up at two with just 12 seconds left in regulation.

On a last desperation shot, Utah goalkeeper Lynnsay Asay-Kimball bobbled the ball and BYU senior forward Jeni Viernes capitalized on the mistake to tie the game and send the two teams into overtime.

BYU had the momentum and the home crowd of over 1,500 boisterous fans behind it, heading into overtime.

However, with one minute left Utah forward Megan Maxwell booted the ball into the upper left corner of the net off a free kick to break a 2-2 tie and send the Utes into the second round.

"I knew I could hit it. I knew I could get it done. I wanted it so bad," Maxwell said.

"You've got to give them credit, you can't ask for a bigger shot," Rockwood said.

Utah seemed one step of the Cougars all night.

"We just didn't have enough to put it away tonight," Rockwood said.

In the second half, the Utes went up 2-1 in minute 72 on a 10-yard blast from senior forward Katie Tate.

"Utah had a very solid game defensively," Rockwood said.

BYU threatened several times in the final minutes before Viernes' game-tying goal.

BYU will regroup next year returning all of its players except Viernes.

"We are a very young team and we had a great journey this year," Rockwood said. "Next year we are going to expect more."

BYU aiming for Lobos

By RYAN HOPE

It has been six weeks since the BYU football team has had a winning record, but the Cougars (5-5) can change that Saturday when they host New Mexico at 4 p.m.

BYU also can become eligible for a postseason bowl with a victory over the Lobos.

At 3-1 in Mountain West Conference action, New Mexico (5-5 overall) is still in position to win the conference title.

"There is a lot of talk from them that they can win the conference," head coach Gary Crowton said. "Right now they're playing really good football."

New Mexico has had an up and down season battling injuries and inconsistency.

Senior running back Quincy Wright was one of the nation's leading rushers, before he suffered a season-ending injury in the Lobos' game against Baylor.

Redshirt freshman Dontrell Moore replaced Wright and has run for 667 yards this season.

Junior Casey Kelly began the season as New Mexico's starting quarterback, but has been hampered with an arm injury.

Freshman backup Kole McKamey has had some off-the-field problems and also has missed time.

Junior walk-on Justin Millea was forced into the starting position, and was named MWC offensive player of the week following the Lobos', 25-16 victory over UNLV on Oct. 12.

Kelly will start for the Lobos, but is not completely healthy.

"I think there are some similarities (between BYU and New Mexico) in that they are young and they have had some challenges like we have," Crowton said.

Senior linebacker Charles Moss leads New Mexico's defensive attack with 83 tackles this season.

"They do a lot of interesting things both on offense and defense," Crowton said. "Blitzing will be different, but they have given up some big plays."

Freshman quarterback Matt

Berry starts his fifth game for the Cougars. Berry is coming off his best performance of the season, throwing for 360 yards and touchdowns against Wyoming.

Berry has thrown seven interceptions this season and has bled on several occasions.

"I don't want him to have interceptions, but I also want him to get nervous and itate," Crowton said. "I just want him to be confident and aggressive."

Cougs sign top recruits

By LEIGH DETHMAN

The women's basketball team is taking advantage of last year's Sweet Sixteen finish, and this season's top-25 preseason ranking.

BASKETBALL The Cougars, already filled with former Mountain View High School standouts, signed two more Bruins: twin sisters Heather and Hollie Hansen.

Heather, a 5-foot-8-inch guard, is a USA Today Junior All-America selection. Deseret News crowned her the Class 5A MVP in 2002.

She was also a Street and Smith All-America Honorable Mention selection in 2001 and 2002, averaging 12 points, 7 assists, and 6 steals per game.

Heather is the first four-year starter in Mountain View's 20-year history.

Hollie, also a 5-foot-8-inch guard, was the State Defensive Player of the Year in Utah in 2001 and 2002. She was a Street and Smith All-America Honorable Mention selection in 2002, averaging 10 points per game.

Mountain View coach Dave Houle said the twins play their heart out on the defensive end of the floor.

"They have a knack to step it up, depending on who they are playing against," Houle said.

The girls followed their big brother, Travis Hansen, a senior standout on the BYU men's basketball team, to BYU.

"I really wish I would be here to play with them," Travis said. "Hopefully they will have a good career, they are really good players."

Houle said going to BYU is a dream come true for the Hansen twins.

"Growing up, that is where they wanted to go," Houle said.

Heather and Hollie also chose BYU because of their father.

"My dad really wanted them to come to BYU so he could watch them play," Travis said. "I think he had an impact on their choice."

Several former Mountain View players are now at BYU — senior guard Erin Thorn, sophomore forward Danielle Cheesman.

"People think we are BYU junior college," Houle said.

Richard L. Bushman

Gouverneur Morris Professor of History, Emeritus,
Columbia University

"The Character of Joseph Smith"

Richard Lyman Bushman grew up in Portland, Oregon. He earned his undergraduate degree from Harvard College and PhD in history of American civilization from Harvard University. He taught at BYU, Boston University, and the University of Delaware before joining the faculty at Columbia University, where he taught from 1989 to 2001.

Bushman's first book From Puritan to Yankee: Character and the Social Order in Connecticut, 1690-1765 won the Bancroft Prize for being one of the best books on American history published in 1967. He has also written on Joseph Smith, early American political culture, and gentility. He is the author of Joseph Smith and the Beginnings of Mormonism, a book covering the Prophet's early years up to the organization of the Church. His most recent book The Refinement of America: Persons, Houses, and Cities tells about the coming of gentility to North America and its spread from the gentry to a broad middle class.

He is currently advisory committee chair for the Joseph Fielding Smith Institute of Latter-day Saint History at BYU and is working on a biography of Joseph Smith.

Professor Bushman and his wife, Claudia, have six children and 16 grandchildren. He serves as Patriarch in the New York, New York Stake in Manhattan.

A question-and-answer session will be held at 12 noon in the Cougar Room of the Marriott Center.

Cougs finishing up year

By MATT MONTAGUE

Coming off a tough loss to 21 Utah last week, the men's volleyball team hosts Wyoming today and Colorado State, Saturday.

The loss dropped the Cougars to 11-1 overall and 6-6 in the Mountain West Conference.

The last time BYU played one of the two teams was on the road. The Cougars came out victorious in both matches.

Surprisingly, the Cougars played better on the road than at home. Within the conference, BYU is 5-2 on the road and 1-3 at home.

"We know we have to work much harder on the road," setter Karina Puikkonen said. "We tend to fall into our comfort zone here at home."

Puikkonen leads the Cougars.

Last week Puikkonen was named Mountain West Conference Player of the Week. Against New Mexico and Air Force she averaged 14.57 assists per game, 1.86 kills per game, 1.43 digs per game and 2.00 blocks per game, while hitting .667.

Junior Laura Nielsen has been a solid force for the Cougars since returning from a broken foot.

Nielsen is currently tied for third in the conference with an attack percentage of .333 and is in second in the conference averaging 1.41 blocks per game.

With sophomore outside hitter April Varner still doubtful for the matches this weekend, the Cougars are looking to senior outside hitter Allison Larson and true freshman outside hitter Kim Wilson to step up and fill in.

Larson is second on the team, behind the injured Varner, averaging 2.80 kills per game. Wilson is right behind Larson averaging 2.57 kills per game.

Wyoming comes into the match 20-8 on the season and 5-7 in the conference.

The Cowgirls defeated Air Force in five games and New Mexico in four games last weekend.

Wyoming is led by the league leader in kills, junior outside hitter Michele Rauter, with a 4.47 kills per game average. Rauter also leads the team in digs, with a 2.97 per game average.

Sophomore setter Amy Doman averages 12.14 assists per game, while freshman middle blocker Liz McDuffie and sophomore outside hitter Sara Maytorena are each averaging 1.17 blocks per game to lead the Cowgirls.

Colorado State is currently in first place in the MWC at 10-2 and is 18-8 on the year.

Both matches will begin at 7 p.m. and will be played in the Smith Fieldhouse.

IceCats take on alumni

By JEREMY TWITCHELL

Provo IceCats players of the past return to their alma mater tonight to face the current team in the first-ever alumni game.

"I'm excited about it," IceCats assistant coach Ed Gantt said. "A lot of these alumni are great hockey players, and this is history."

The alumni team consists of 23 former IceCats who are coming from across the U.S. and Canada for the event.

One alumnus, Michael Stroud, is coming from Hawaii, where he is stationed as a Marine pilot. Stroud played on the team in 1994 and is making the trip just for this game.

Joe Bernardy and Indy Walton, who are responsible for bringing the IceCats back in 1994 after a 10-year absence, will also be at the game. Bernardy will act as the alumni team captain as well.

"The alumni are pleased to play the current IceCats, and we hope to be able to teach them to turn left," Bernardy said, in reference to the younger team's relative inexperience.

Tim Chou, who currently acts as director of program development for the IceCats, will face his own players tonight when he suits up with the alumni team.

For their part, the current IceCats say they are looking forward to playing against their predecessors.

"We're excited because we get to play against guys we haven't played in a while," senior defenseman Dan Haws said. "We'll take it to them and show them how the new IceCats play."

To keep injuries to a minimum, no checks will be allowed in the game. Chou said this was a precaution in the interest of the older team's health, but should not affect the way the game is played.

"It's all in good spirits, and it should be a lot of fun," he said.

Y playing in Vegas

By MARC OWEN

The BYU men's tennis team heads to Las Vegas for the Region VII Team Indoor Tournament.

The winner of this weekend's regional team tournament will go to nationals to compete in February.

The Cougars earned the chance to participate in the team tournament with their performance last month in the ITA Regional VII Championships.

Coach Jim Osborne said the Cougars have a good chance of winning the tournament.

"Because this tournament is indoors, I think we might have a slight advantage," Osborne said in a news release.

Other teams in the tournament are Boise State, New Mexico, San Diego State and Utah.

Program aids troubled youth

One-to-One productive activities

By CHANTEL RHODES

Elisha Shephard says her life would not be what it is today without her friend Rochelle Banks.

"Ro changed my life," Shephard said.

The two met through a program called One-to-One, which pairs at-risk youth with volunteer mentors to create constructive experiences for youth.

Shephard was 13 when her parents enrolled her in the program, which is offered by Community Action Services. Now, at 19, Shephard is applying to become a mentor herself.

Shephard is the first mentor applicant to have been through the program as a youth, according to her mentor Rochelle Banks.

Banks, 23, is a senior majoring in marriage, family and human development.

"This may sound selfish, but I want to make a difference in somebody else's life," Shephard said.

Shephard's parents wanted her to do well in school and stay out of trouble, but they were out of touch, she said.

They would ask what she was doing, but they didn't genuinely get involved or check up on her.

Things at home were not

"We're not trying to fix problems, we're trying to prevent them."

Rochelle Banks
One-to-One counselor

always the best — sometimes her parents would fight, and there was not a lot of open communication in the family, Shephard said.

Shephard was reluctant to discuss the details of her family life, but said it wasn't religious.

It seemed Banks and Shephard didn't have much in common. Shephard said she didn't think Banks could relate with her.

Banks was a BYU freshman at the time, and a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"I didn't like (Rochelle) when I first met her," she said.

Shephard's friends, before she met Banks, liked to party.

"When we did stuff we'd get into trouble," she said.

Most of her seventh-grade friends were sexually active, as well.

"I thought there was one road," Shephard said. "I didn't have any decisions."

Banks said she became a volunteer after seeing a One-to-One booth on campus.

Jennifer Marx, director of the One-to-One program, said the program is designed to help youth like Shephard.

The goal of One-to-One is to provide constructive activities and relationships for youth, according to Marx.

"We're not trying to fix problems," she said. "We're trying to prevent them."

Banks and Shephard became partners about a month after Shephard joined the program.

They would go for ice cream at the Malt Shoppe, go hiking or have Sunday dinner with Banks' roommates, Banks said.

The friends usually didn't do anything extravagant — they just spent time together.

"Me and my partner just like to go and talk," she said.

Banks and Shephard are still good friends.

When Banks spent five months in Jerusalem for a study abroad program, the two wrote letters, Banks said.

They also kept in touch during Banks' mission in Paraguay, she said.

Shephard said she is grateful to Banks for helping change her perspective to realize she had choices about where her life would go.

"She introduced me to the gospel," Shephard said. She credits Banks' friendship and the gospel in her life and direction she has taken since her middle school days.

Shephard still talks to some of her old friends occasionally and said "it's almost scary" to see where they are today.

"All my friends are pregnant," she said.

Shephard graduated from Timpview High School in Provo and plans to attend Utah Valley State College in January.

Deseret Book bans book by popular LDS author

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Richard Paul Evans, author of "The Christmas Box," has a new book on the shelves but not the shelves of Deseret Book.

The chain of bookstores, owned by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has decided not to stock copies of the best-selling author's latest book, "The Last Promise," because it doesn't meet its new standards for moral content.

Evans said he is "puzzled" by Deseret Book's refusal to stock the book recently published by Dutton in New York.

"It happened in an awkward sort of way," Evans said during an interview Wednesday at a Borders bookstore, where his first book signing had been moved.

"Every year I do my first book signing at Deseret Book. So, I called my staff and they said, 'Deseret Book is not going to do the first signing with you. In fact, they're not even going to sell your book.'"

"I just started laughing, because I have a lot of friends at Deseret Book. Then I realized none of my staff was laughing."

The book is about an American woman living in Italy who, in the face of an abusive relationship with her husband, turns to another man for emotional support and, eventually, romance.

Evans said he is surprised by the negative reaction, especially since the affair between the woman and her male friend is never consummated. The theme is love, not sex, he said.

"The book is not about adultery," Evans, a practicing Mormon, said. "The book would be a PG-rated movie, at the most."

Sheri Dew, president of Deseret Book, said it was simply a business decision.

The chain commissioned a study which showed that their customers do not like to buy books that violate "their core values," Dew said.

As a result the store implemented guidelines telling the store's buyers to avoid or remove books that clash with the firm's values.

Though the process began, store employees eventually comb through 250,000 titles in the stores' inventory to remove other books that might offend, Dew said.

Evans said he suspected the flap will actually help the sale of his book.

"Now everyone wants to see the book and see what is controversial," Evans said.

"I told my 14-year-old son, 'Dad, this isn't what your book's about did they get the wrong book?'"

Avoiding carbon monoxide poisoning

- Have your furnace and heating system inspected and serviced annually.
- Never run an automobile in the garage or any other type of enclosed space.
- Have your chimney cleaned professionally.
- Make sure that the burner flames on your furnace and stove burn blue, not yellow-orange.
- Never use your gas range or oven for heating.
- Never use grills or hibachis inside your home.
- Never operate gas burning heaters or appliances in a closed room.

Winter brings higher carbon monoxide risk

By WHITNEY LAWLESS

Cold weather brings the threat of carbon monoxide poisoning to Utah homes.

Furnaces heat up and windows stay shut, creating a chance for higher carbon monoxide levels in the home.

Carbon monoxide is often called the "silent killer" because it is an odorless, colorless and tasteless gas. According to the Utah Safety Council, carbon monoxide gives little or no warning of its presence. In high amounts, it can be deadly in as little as five minutes.

"The gas kills 40 Utahns every year," said Robert Parenti, president of the Utah Safety Council.

Exposure to carbon monoxide inhibits blood's capacity to carry oxygen throughout the body.

"The symptoms of carbon monoxide include nausea and headaches," Parenti said.

"These symptoms are very misleading because they could come from anything. People may think they have the flu," Parenti said.

The deadly gas is produced when fuel burns incompletely.

Common sources for carbon monoxide include faulty furnaces, car exhaust and fuel-burning heaters.

"The main message we want to get out is that people need to get their furnaces checked yearly," Parenti said.

Local apartment complexes say they check furnaces yearly.

"We have a carbon monoxide detector in each living room which is near the heater," said Sarah Smith, manager for Riviera Apartments. "The heaters are checked regularly."

Parenti said the placement of the detector is also critical.

"The only protection, the most effective protection, is a carbon monoxide detector," Parenti said.

"Carbon monoxide poisoning can be easily avoided by installing detectors near bedrooms," he said.

There is a wide range of detectors on the market. Prices range anywhere from $25 to $60, Parenti said.

Detectors are sold at the Utah Safety Council and at local hardware stores.

Certain heating devices are not appropriate for indoor use and can increase carbon monoxide levels, Parenti said.

These devices include grills and heating devices that are flame driven.

Making sure the burner flames on a stove burn blue, not yellow-orange, and making sure a gas range or oven is never used for heating are a few tips given by the Utah Safety Council to avoid high levels of carbon monoxide.

"People just need to understand with the increase of furnace use and less ventilation, the chance for carbon monoxide poisoning is much higher," Parenti said. "Carbon monoxide detectors are a must."
